

Election Administration Data Sources

Good data on many aspects of election administration processes in the United States is available from a number of reputable sources. The Carter Center has curated a list of strong datasets that are useful resources for anyone interested in exploring election data – including state- and county-level voter turnout on Election Day, mail-voting totals and rejection rates, and polling places across the United States.

- U.S. Election Assistance Commission, Election Administration and Voting Survey data:
<https://www.eac.gov/research-and-data/datasets-codebooks-and-surveys>
- Elections Performance Index
<https://elections.mit.edu/#/data/map>
- MIT Election Data and Science Lab
<https://electionlab.mit.edu/data#tools>
- U.S. Elections Project, U.S. General Elections Early Vote Statistics:
<https://electproject.github.io/Early-Vote-2020G/index.html>
- Stanford-MIT Healthy Elections Project:
<https://healthyelections.org/>
- Verified Voting, Polling Place Voting Equipment, November 2020
<https://verifiedvoting.org/verifier/#mode/navigate/map/ppEquip/mapType/normal/year/2020>
- Center for Public Integrity, U.S. Polling Places November 2020
<https://github.com/publici/us-polling-places>
- Open Elections Project, Election Day precinct-level vote totals
<http://openelections.net/>